

Saucony® Announces Daikanyama Capsule Collection

Where modern design meets organic imperfection, Available September 15

September 18, 2026 – Saucony, a leading global performance running lifestyle brand, today announced the Daikanyama capsule collection, inspired by one of Tokyo's most design-forward neighborhoods. The new collection features the Kinvara 1, ProGrid Omni 9, ProGrid Guide 7, and the Endorphin Speed 5, launching September 15 at Saucony.com and select retailers.

"This collection reflects the understated modernity of the iconic Daikanyama neighborhood in Tokyo," said Brian Moore, chief product officer at Saucony. "The cities architecture leans brutalist, softened by ivy-covered concrete and weathered steel, where nature weaves through clean lines, creating a balance of industrial edge and quiet beauty; this contrast is exactly where the collection draws from. With aged textures and muted tones, the Daikanyama collection evokes a refined, retro-tech sensibility, inspired by one of Tokyo's most beloved cultural enclaves and designed by former Tokyo resident Josh Fraser."

Kinvara 1 Features:

- Features a low profile and open mesh for breathability
- Offers a lower profile take within the retro tech category
- Fade colors and updated graphics nod to the original design while giving it a redefined look for the season

ProGrid Omni 9 Features:

- Redefines comfort for modern day
- Maintains sharp aesthetic to make it a timeliness standout

ProGrid Guide 7 Features:

- Fresh re-release keeping Saucony's running DNA alive
- Foundation of protection and comfort

Endorphin Speed 5 Features:

- Delivers fast, smooth miles with redesigned nylon plate
- Responsive PWRRUN PB cushioning
- Light, quick and built for speed

The Daikanyama collection is available in unisex sizing from 3.5-12, 13, 14 and for a suggested retail price of $150 USD for the Kinvara 1, $174 USD for the ProGrid Omni 9, $145 USD for the ProGrid Guide 7, and $175 USD for the Endorphin Speed 5 at www.saucony.com and select retailers.
